The State of InCOXitation

Seniors T[illegible] Pat Baldwin, Amy Riddick, Charlie Lindaver, and Cathy Welborn cheer the popular C-O-X.

If you were swept off your feet by an exhilarating wrestling match, danced until dawn on Prom Night, or if you were dazzled by the band's precision marching, you were caught in the state of inCOXitation. If you wore Green and Gold, bought a candy gram, worked hard for that A in math and sat on Santa's lap, you were inCOXitated. InCOXitation extended beyond classes into the halls, spread to clubs, and filtered into life outside of school. We lived with success, with failure, with loss and gain, and the style with which we lived throughout the year was our own spirited state, the state of inCOXitation.

The early momentum of the Homecoming game carried over to the sidelines, sweeping Toby Lucy, Chris Fountain and the football team into a wave of inCOXitation.

Senior Mandy Tavares is inCOXitated by the thrill of becoming the 1986-1987 Homecoming Queen.

Too occupied with bubbles and food, seniors Jonathon Stauffer and Jennifer Pennington find Calculus incalculable.

During the "famous Young Life minutes," Ami Woodard claims she's not a "chubby bunny" with eight marshmallows in her mouth.

The possibilities offered by a phone call incited John Prodan to bubble over with inCOXitation.

On Green and Gold Day, Marc Mayette and Allison Blozsom cut the links for the spirit links competition.

While others try for the slender look, Cathy Welborn is inflated by the inCOXitation of Green and Gold Day.

BUBBLING OVER WITH INCOXITATION

The very essence of inCOXitation, our spirit, our pride was what being a Falcon was all about. The sources varied, from the willingness to strive for academic or artistic excellence, to the satisfaction in sinking a jump shot, or having a good day at work. From the most visible achievers to the students who simply did their best. It couldn't be contained, we all bubbled over with inCOXitation.

The newest member of the cheering squad, Dr. Burletine Karlen, is inCOXitated with Homecoming Spirit.

AN INCOXITATING EXPERIENCE

The total student body engaged in and provided one another with some of the most thrilling, most touching, most intensely inCOXitating moments imaginable. What feeling could compare to the fever pitch of Homecoming week and all of the inter-class competitions? Who would have dreamed that our pockets and our hearts would have opened so widely for the United Way? Who could have made us laugh as much as Donald Morris on Hero Day or Dr. Burletine Karlen as she donned a cheering uniform and led us in a Homecoming cheer? Could any other school boast an SCA president who reached such heights as Wendell Cosenza? These and other people entertained and enthralled us at isolated times. Combined, they made up the inCOXitating experience that was our Student Life.

Coming Out

Into the Real World!

The weatherman was wrong. Rain had been predicted all day, and many seniors were wishing they had voted to hold graduation at the Pavilion. However, when the sun broke through the gray sky in the late afternoon, it was obvious that the choice to hold the ceremony in the stadium was the best one.

The proud parents and guests of 500 graduating seniors filed into the stadium and found seats on the bleachers while anxiously awaiting the commencement of the service. The traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" could be heard as the ecstatic seniors marched onto the field. Several speakers were scheduled, including Mr. Bill Whitehurst. Following his talk, Susan Wood gave a memorable valedictory speech. Finally it was time for the seniors to receive their diplomas. While Mr. Williams and Mr. Porter announced the students' names, Dr. Karlen and Mrs. Waters shook hands and distributed diplomas. The service was finally completed, and 500 hats flew up into the air. The happy graduates marched off of the field to meet their parents and attend the reception in the cafeteria.

At the reception following the ceremony, proud graduates Surena Fazeli-Matin, Ted Travelsted, and Morel Symons celebrate their new-found freedom.

Attempting to balance the hats upon their heads, honor graduates Stacey Fitzpatrick and Matt Hayden receive help from Mrs. Ingrid Dickens.

Spirit Week

The Key to Falcon Fever

Unusual things began to happen during the third week in October. Flatbeds were parked behind the stadium and there was a steady stream of lumber and pizza deliveries. Saws hummed and hammers pounded nails as clubs and classes began to put their floats into final form.

All week long competition between the classes thrived. Spirit links were sold during all lunches and the winning evidence, thousands of Senior green links, was on display at the Homecoming Pep Rally. Dressup days added a little color and excitement to the pre-Homecoming festivities. Fifties day brought out greasers and bobby-soxers and Denise Morgan was the best bopper of them all.

Tuesday was career day and every profession imaginable was represented, even housewives in this age of modern women. Doctor Pennington and John Jansen MD took first place . . . STAT.

Max Headroom rubbed shoulders with Tina Turner and more than one Dolly Parton dined in the cafeteria. What looked like Halloween was actually Celebrity Day and Donald Morris as our own Mr. Porter captured the first prize among the rich and famous.

Thursday brought out the Alfred E. Newman in all of us on the first Nerd Day during Spirit Week. Unmatched polyester and pen-filled pockets were proper attire with Christi Davis and Ted Sakis, scoring highest for the overall tackiness.

Faculty and students alike decked out in Green and Gold on Friday which began with the now traditional Senior Spirit Parade. Resplendent in green and yellow balloons, senior Cathy Welborn floated to a first place win.

At the Homecoming Pep Rally there was further competition between classes in the form of cheers and relay races led by a new member of the cheering squad, Cheerleader Dr. Karlen!! When asked why she decided to join the squad, Dr. Karlen replied, "I dressed up like a cheerleader to show a little school spirit. It was a lot of fun."

Nerd Day provided us with many laughs like this one from Billy Sawyer.

The competition was fierce as Alan Norman, Ricky Engel, and Marc Mayette awaited the judges' decision on Green and Gold Day.

Majestic Interlude

Glitter at Halftime

The 1986 Homecoming night was filled with excitement. Although our football team suffered a loss, the halftime celebration was colorful and memorable. The Theme, "The Past is the Key to the Future," challenged the students to portray on their float previous events that had relevance to the years to come. Every float showed time, creativity, and much effort put forth by members of each organization.

The fourth-place winner out of ten floats, the Latin Club, showed the chariot as a fore-runner of the spaceship. The French Club took third place with their focus on the French and Indian War. The second place winner, the sophomore class, showed education as the "key." The winning float was that of the junior class, showing "Alice" and the "Looking-Past Mirror."

The Homecoming Court presentation at half-time was a show of elegance. The 1985 Homecoming Queen, Rachel Atkinson, returned to crown the new queen, Mandy Tavares. Our principal, Mrs. Lottie B. Waters, presented Mandy with a bouquet of one dozen roses. Other senior representatives were Meg Dobson. Kim Haynie, Amy Riddick, and Natalie Taylor. Junior representatives were Nicole Andrews and Sheri Miles. Representing the sophomore class were Amy Collier and Michelle Whetmore. The Freshman Class chose Amber Medlin and Courtney Wilson as their representatives.

You Better Watch Out

Falcons Wrap Up the Holidays

Months of longing were finally coming to an end as the time for the holiday vacation approached. The foyer was decorated in green and reds as visions of vacation danced in students' heads. The tree in the cafeteria was decorated with care, and everyone hoped vacation would soon be there.

Beginning in December, various holiday activities were organized. On December sixth, the S.C.A. had a dance, hosting the well-known East Coast band, "The Ravens." Although the band did not live up to its reputation, the dance was still a success due to the thorough planning of the dance committee. The following week the cheerleaders held a pep rally in holiday style, featuring Mark Petersen as Santa Claus.

The week of the 15th was a busy one. The S.C.A. sponsored a contest in which homeroom classes were encouraged to decorate their doors to win a $40 certificate for the teacher at the restaurant of his choice and a wall clock or electric pencil sharpener for the classroom. First place was awarded to Mrs. Frost and her homeroom class. At the same time, students were given the opportunity to show their appreciation for the faculty by participating in Secret Santa week. Students chose a teacher to do something special for, such as giving them a gift. The following Monday, the S.C.A. held a reception so that the participating teachers could meet their Secret Santas. Throughout the month, the holiday spirit was alive and well.

"The Play's the Thing"

Spring and Fall Theatricals

Under the direction of drama teacher Mr. Garrett, both he spring and fall drama productions were pectacular success. The spring musical was a whimsical production based on the fairy tale, "The Princess and the Pea." Meg Dobson as rincess Winnifred the Wobegone charmed rince Dauntless, Larry Bayles. Other fine performances were given by Pat Dooley, Jeff Ames, and Nicole Andrews. Commented senior Allison Bloxom, choreographer, "We had so many people try out that Mr. Garrett chose a musical with a large cast. It was a great group of people to work with."

The fall play, The Man Who Came To Dinner, starred Sally March and Larry Bayles. The play, a comedy, depicting a stranger taking advantage of an innocent family, ended with an ironic twist. The elaborate sets demanded the skills and time of the Drama II, III, IV classes.

Each production required countless hours of rehearsal each week, and the final products reflected the talent and time that went into each. Musical cast member Matt Jackson said, "It was hard work but definitely worth every minute of effort."

On The Town

Let the Good Times Roll!

3:00 — Anticipation rose in the hearts of juniors as the hour for ring Dance approached.

5:00 — Juniors all over the Cox district began to prepare for the night's festivities. As the girls primped in front of mirrors, their dates waxed their dads' Mercedes.

6:30 — Dates began arriving in their shining cars at the homes of junior girls all over the city. As parents fumbled frantically with cameras, couples posed in front of the fireplace with phony smiles.

7:00 — Couples began arriving at the Holiday Inn Executive Center. Excited voices could be heard from inside the hotel. Males awkwardly helped their dates out of cars and up to the door.

7:30 — Dinner was served. After dining, the dancing started.

10:30 — The ring ceremony started as people approached the bridge with their dates to receive their rings. They wobbled onto the bridge over a shaky cinder-block and kissed one another.

12:00 — Midnight! Juniors left the Executive Center with rings on their fingers, blisters on their feet, and a warm memory of the highlight of their junior year.

Two Fun For Words

Couples Step Out In Style

During the last grueling year of high school, the minds of seniors tended to dwell on one of the most glamorous dances of the year. It was events like this that let many of us show our true colors. On prom night, seniors left their jeans, t-shirts, sweatshirts, and tennis shoes at home. The girls got out their new dresses, and the guys put on their tuxedos.

Last year's prom was held at the Ramada Inn, Oceanfront. The turnout was incredible. Those who waited until the last moment were disappointed to find out that the dance was sold out. When couples weren't sitting down or carrying on conversations, they were most likely found dancing to music provided by a local band, The Plaad.

At the end of the night's festivities the guys took their dates home, and the next morning the seniors took back their regular identities and their rented finery.

Sun-Days

Summer Fun Heats Up

83rd Street. The very name evokes the thought of summer and the smell of Panama Jack coconut oil. Summer was sun, surfing, and festivity packed into three short months that passed all too quickly.

Harborfest kicked off the season as thousands of people poured into Town Point Park to celebrate the official return of summer. "It was amazing that out of the half million people there, I ran into a huge group of people from Cox!" exclaimed Sarah Ashton.

From that point on, summer was non-stop fun as we packed the strip and cruised the Boardwalk. The long drought meant bad days for local farmers, but great days for working on that perfect tan. While there may have been a lack of rain, but there was no shortage of entertainment. From cooling down at Wild Water Rapids to a few rounds of Jungle Golf, those days of summer were anything but lazy!

Thursday Night Out

Young Life Has Mass Appeal

Thursday already? You say you have a ton of homework to do? What? You're not stopping at TCBY? You're going straight home to do your homework? Oh yeah, it's Young Life tonight. All week long you were looking towards an evening out of the house and a chance for fun and fellowship.

Young Life is an extracurricular organization that is not officially affiliated with school or school clubs, yet it boasted a large membership. Under the leadership of both adults and students, Young Life incorporates fun and games with a more serious religious theme. Young Life also provided many occasions for interaction with students from other schools, such as Camp Saranac in New York and the Chesapeake Challenge, which was a week of survival skills on a yacht on the Chesapeake Bay.

"After spending a week on the Bay with no shower but bay water, I was glad to be on land. The trip, a challenge of my endurance, was great because I had the time to get to know myself," said Susan McClellan.

Young Life clubs usually attract a large crowd, such as this one.

Taking No Prisoners

Juniors Play Rough at Powder Puff

The seniors did not pay attention to the message printed on the back of the shirts of juniors, "Juniors are tuff." However, after having been beaten 22-0, they all wished they had heeded the warning.

Despite more than a week of long practices, the seniors were not prepared for the juniors. Although the seniors played well, the juniors' strategy and speed perservered.

There were several factors contributing to the seniors' loss. Because of inclement weather, the game was postponed from its original date, and much of the seniors' momentum was lost. During the course of one of the roughest girls' games ever played, one of the key senior players, Lori Grubbs, was injured in a tackle attempt. Nevertheless, the seniors practiced good sportsmanship. Co-captain for the seniors, Sarah Ashton, commented, "Even though the juniors won, we had a great time playing."

The confidence of the juniors was written all over the back of Sarah McElvein.

After School Action

The Day is Just Beginning

What's the one thing students didn't want to do after six hours of school? Homework, although sometimes it was necessary to go straight home and hit the books in order to avoid staying up half the night. Most of the time, though, after school activities were the majority's choice on how to spend their free time. From Debate to Science Club, students were involved in a wide range of clubs that reflected their interest. The level of involvement in these clubs varied from half-hour meetings every two weeks to two hour meetings five days a week.

Many students found the idea of earning money more appealing and chose to spend their time outside of school on the job. Cox students could be found all over Virginia Beach, from Farm Fresh to Dan Ryan's for Men.

Aside from extracurricular activities and working, some popular pastimes after 2:00 p.m. were working out, sleeping, shopping, or going to a popular gathering spot, such as TCBY, and gorging to forget a terrible day at school. Whether it was activities, work, or just plain fun, the students were never at a loss on how to spend their free time.

In the afternoon, Sarah Ashton, Anna-Liisa Benti, Molly Whelahan, and Kristen Wilcox spend an exciting two hours working on the yearbook.

Whiz Kids

Students Who Excel

Students strive to uphold the reputation of academic excellence in all areas, from the arts to leadership to SAT's. There are many opportunities for students to achieve distinction.

In their junior year, 5 students are nominated to apply to the Governor's School for the Gifted. Last year, two lucky students were chosen to attend. Also in the summer, several students attended Girls' and Boys' State. Students are nominated for this on the basis of their involvement in school activities and their leadership ability. Other school leaders are selected to attend the Virginia Beach Leadership Workshop, during which new office holders learn the skills necessary to do what is expected of them. Senior Class President, Alex Sadler, commented, "Leadership Workshop was a very special week; I was thrown into a group with a bunch of strangers, and by the end of the week, we were all the very best of friends."

Most of the honors previously mentioned are geared towards upperclassmen. However, the innovative Superthinker Seminar honored many freshmen and sophomores. The Governor's Magnet School for the Arts is open to all ages. Because of the multitude of talent in the school, we sent several representatives.

The "Tidewater Challenge" is a game show in which students from various area high schools participate in televised competition. The team consists of 4 players and 4 alternates.

Because of their outstanding performance on the Scholastic Aptitude tests, three students qualified for National Merit scholarships as semi-finalists. "It was a great way to brighten up a Monday morning!" added semi-finalist Barbara Elliott.

Interests and Talents

While most seniors looked forward to going away to college, Becky Lemburg anxiously awaited the trip to Paris which kicked off a career in modeling. Aside from being a very talented model, she was, as well, an excellent student and said that she would go to college, but not immediately. "Everyone thinks modeling is all fun, but I've learned that it is really hard work," added Becky Lemburg. There were many other students who devote much time to outside interests.

Senior Tammy Tasheiko rushed home, finished her homework, and rushed out again quite often to the nearby stable to ride Emma, her horse. After spending some time away from the equestrian sport, Tammy said she was glad to be "back in the saddle again." She regarded riding as the "great escape" after a physically and mentally gruelling day at school.

Skateboarding had become a very popular activity among teenagers. Driving through almost any neighborhood, you were bound to see someone maneuvering his board in the street. After much practice, Tommy Stewart appeared to have perfected this art.

Both having started at an early age, Jocelyn West and Nell-Garwood MacEachern had acquired a great passion for dance. Hardworking and determined, Jocelyn has attained great skill in ballet through extensive practice and quality instruction. Nell-Garwood's avid interest in her Scottish heritage and dancing had aided her in achieving a national rank in Highland Dancing. "Between teaching and taking lessons, I spend a lot of time on my feet, but it's worth it," said Nell-Garwood MacEachern.

Modeling is more than a pastime for Becky Lemburg; it looks like a future career.

For some, homeroom is a chance to take one last glance at the makeup.

Be It Ever So Early

There's No Place Like Homeroom

Second bell on the first day opened with the traditional "May I have your attention for the morning announcements?" and then the students were bombarded with pertinent tips for survival during the year.

Not every homeroom was spent filling out forms and reviewing school policy. More times than not, homeroom consisted of announcements and the homeroom teacher shuffling those gold attendance cards. Occasionally there were diversions: Mr. Gary Leagan hunting down stray students, a United Way Fund collection, holiday door decorations, or Homecoming and SCA ballots to be completed.

Homeroom offered a brief respite during which students took a glance at homework, caught a few quick Z's, adjusted makeup, or gossiped with classmates. And of course, the focal point of the ten-minute periods was the announcements. Just who were those two people who served as the voice of the Falcons?

After a rigorous audition and selection process, Ted Sakis and Christine Abbate were chosen to pass along vital information or, during National Library Month, the trivia of the day.

"We were really excited to be the announcers. At first I was nervous, and Ted used to switch my papers so that I'd find myself repeating the announcements," said Christine Abbate.

Rounding up attendance cards every morning was one of many tasks assigned to teacher Mrs. Karen Jenkins.

When Christine Abbate and Ted Sakis talk, the whole school listens.

Out of the Shadows

Falcon Fashions

Glitter, fame, and fortune. These come with the life of a model but aren't the only things behind the seemingly glamorous job as our students found out in the annual fashion show. Hard work and lots of time play important roles as well.

After two days of try-outs, the student models were finally chosen. With the help of choreographer Jon Vogt, our models were able to put on a spectacle of fun and colorful fashions featuring clothing from Lee Kartis, Bahama Shop, Berman's, and Clemens. Hot dance scenes and romantic love scenarios created the themes for the show. Keeping the audiences interested in between the scenes were the free door prizes donated by many local stores.

Some things we can be sure of are the hard work and long hours that were put into the show. By working together our Cox High fashion models were able to create a show better than any like it.

Survival Tips

When there are over 2,000 people of varying ages at one school there is bound to be a wide range of tastes. However, certain things seem to be well-liked by everyone. Of course, there are also those things that most people do not like which are not accepted in almost any social circle.

Looking around the halls, you might feel as if you are at a local university. Although backpacks have been popular on college campuses for years, bookbags weren't really accepted until this year. This more organized way of lugging books to and from school is definitely a DO. Nevertheless, you still might see a few ambitious freshmen campaigning for the title of "Most Studious" with a pile of books in their arms. However, that is a DON'T.

Brown-baggers appeared to be a dying race ever since Deli Day was introduced on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Deli sandwiches were much preferred to the familiar chicken filet and the dreaded hot lunch, as well as the usually safe bag lunch. Deli Day earned its standing as a DO.

Riding the bus to school is often excused if you're a freshman or a sophomore. But, for juniors and seniors, there's no other way to go except by car. When asked about riding the bus, senior Susan McClellan commented, "I'd rather walk." For the most part, riding the bus is definitely a DON'T.

The new style in girls' hair this year was bows, one of the biggest DO'S of the year. Fortunately for those who really needed to use the bathroom, there weren't as many people in the way spraying hairspray in all directions because teased hair just wasn't the style and a big DON'T.

If you want to succeed socially in high school, there are only these simple guidelines to follow. These tips should help you get on your way.

WORLD CLASS ACTIVITY

Foreign Language Week

By a proclamation from the Governor, the first week of March was designated officially as Foreign Language Week, and we here at Cox did our fair share to celebrate it.

Monday, the kick-off day, select language classes were invited to hear Hope Mihalap, who provided insight and a humorous approach to the study of foreign languages, after beginning the day with the pledge in French.

Tuesday was German Day, and in addition to the pledge in German, the staff began its day with gummi bears in mailboxes. Wednesday, Latin Day, was a chance for some not-so-serious competition between language classes in the traditional Latin-sponsored Silly Olympics, won by an awesome Spanish team. Thursday, the language classes provided an all-day smorgasbord for the staff as we all were startled to hear the pledge of allegiance in Russian. Friday, Spanish Day, saw Level 3, 4, and 5 language students sent out to elementary schools to teach mini-lessons to grades K-6.

Saturday was the city-wide observation, and Cox High students competed against other schools in prepared forensics, impromptu speaking, and International Trivia. Cox's German speakers were first-place city-wide overall, and our trivia team placed second in the city. Individual speakers won different honors as well.

"Our performance at Green Run was outstanding!" exclaimed Mrs. Margaret Beckner. 'The students prove their proficiency to us every day. Here we proved it to the whole city."

Visuals such as this helped Sarah McElvein teach her elementary class.

French students Mike Hopper and Gil Compo get their "class" involved in the lesson.

Using phonetics, Will Dasher and Robyn Hudson teach correct pronunciation to their elementary school class.

Wearing her fancy-dress toga, Candice Morrison attends the Language Fair held at Green Run High School.

Trivia team members Dwight Gibbs and Gil Compo show their enthusiasm over their victory.

Introduced by Mr. Larry Becker, the Cox High School Trivia Team, Tammy Tasheiko; Alec Marshall; Dwight Gibbs; Gil Compo; and Shawn McCausland; awaits the first toss-up question.

"The Glamorous Life"

Miss Cox Has The Key

The Key Club did another excellent job with the Miss Cox Pageant this year. Many hours of hard work and organization shone through on that night of the pageant. All of the girls, looking spectacular, certainly did appear to live the "Glamorous Life."

As the spectacle began, all of the contestants sang and danced together to their opening number. In their black leotards with high kicks, the girls were our own version of the Rockettes. Following the opening dancing and singing act, the girls were than able to show the audience their individual talents. From dancing to singing to playing the piano, each girl became a star as she stepped onto the stage. The most original talent, however, was a Korean fan dance performed by Susan MacDonald.

Following the talent segment was the evening gown competition. Each girl, as she walked across the stage and spun around for the judges, was a vision of loveliness in the special gown she had selected that reflected both her personality and taste.

The moment then came when the judges had to choose five finalists. While judges were tallying scores, Meg Dobson, Amy Riddick, and Jeff Ames entertained all who were present. Then, with one last look at the finalists, the three winners were chosen. The second runner-up was senior Pam Pascual. Amber Medlin, freshman, was chosen as the first runner-up. Finally, it was time to announce the new Miss Cox for 1987. As Amy Riddick, Miss Cox 1986, announced the winner's name, anyone could tell by the excited reaction of the audience that they agreed with the judges' decisions. The new Miss Cox, 1987 was Susan MacDonald.

Upon hearing the announcement that she would reign as the new Miss Cox, Susan MacDonald looks happy and surprised.

In between competitions, Meg Dobson and Amy Riddick entertain by singing "By My Side" and "The Rose."

The winning contestants of the Miss Cox 1987 Pageant were Amber Medlin, first runner-up, Susan MacDonald, Miss Cox 1987, and Pam Pascual, second runner-up.

Junior Carol Vest was voted Miss Congeniality by the other girls for being the nicest, most helpful contestant.

After Christi Edwards and Sarah Hess asked the question, contestant Amber Medlin answers enthusiastically while Carol Vest and Pam Pascual await their turns.

Levels of InCOXitation

From the youngest freshman to the most veteran faculty members, we were marked by diversity, yet unified by the one thing that gave us all that common bond. We were all Falcons. Each class, each person left his own mark on the school, whether in the subject taught, the club sponsored, or the locker opened with the start of each day. Each person affiliated with Cox, from principal to counselor, from senior to junior to sophomore to freshman, worked to his own individual level of excellence; together we were the Levels of InCOXitation.

Seniority Rules

Graduates have certain privileges

Senior privileges may have seemed few and far between, but, in actuality, the seniors were granted several privileges. Admittedly, some seemed dubious, but the majority of them were fully appreciated.

The graduating class — the whole class — was given a special treat. All the seniors piled into a fleet of buses in order to go to the Pavilion to see a modern rendition of Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing." Though not everyone enjoyed the fact that the play was Shakespearean, the general consensus was that the trip as a whole was enjoyable. The best part, seniors said, was that they were able to miss a full day of school. Typical of the graduates, right?

Along those same lines, the senior class was given a class assembly in the auditorium. The topic of discussion was the magazine sale. The assembly was a success and most found it very worthwhile since it brought together the whole class. Senior Senate was along these same lines. For the first time, government classes elected representatives to attend Senate meetings in which solely senior issues were discussed.

The final and most important privilege given to the seniors was the status of being a senior itself. After all, it makes perfect sense to save the best year for last.

Dressed to the hilt in green and gold, Amy Riddick and Shannon Myers prep for the Senior Parade.

Practicing her smiling techniques, Alison Bloxsom prepares for senior portraits, one distinct privilege.

You Picked 'Em

Officers, Senators worked hard for you

It was definitely a year of firsts. We were the first to graduate after spending four full years in the new building. The pride and knowledge of this fact convinced seniors to go that extra mile in order to make our last year fantastic. The achievements were many, but they might not have been as outstanding had it not been for the ready, willing and able class officers: president Alex Sadler, vice-president Bill Brownlow, treasurer John Dustin, secretary Alison Davis, and second vice-president Kristen Wilcox. They led the pack on to victory.

Not only were we the first to enter the new building as freshmen (remember that?), but we were also the first class to create a Senior Senate. The main purpose of the Senate was to give the twelfth graders a chance to meet in order to discuss solely senior issues. Prom and the graduation ceremony were, of course, the main topics on the agenda. The concept of the Senate was ideal since seniors were scattered throughout several lunches.

Fundraisers were discussed, too. We were off to a high flying start with the sale of green and gold balloons for Homecoming. The big push went for the magazine sale. It seemed that the graduating class was challenged by Kellam: sell the most magazines or face the humiliation of a pie in Alex Sadler's face.

So went the school year: balloons, magazine sales, and above all, incredible senior spirit. The Senate was in session, and the seniors were making sure it was . . . a year of firsts.

In an effort to boost magazine sales, officers Bill Brownlow, Alison Davis, Alex Sadler, John Dustin, and Kristen Wilcox display valuable prizes.

Welcome to the Future

What Will It Hold?

"Que sera, sera. Whatever will be, will be," sang Doris Day. Though she wasn't as popular with this generation as she used to be, her words still held meaning.

Twenty years from their graduating year, what will these seniors be doing? Some had set plans for their future; some had a vague idea of what they wanted. Some had no idea at all. Whatever category they were in, the majority of the seniors knew that their tentative plans would probably be subject to many changes.

In twenty years, many of the seniors will be in for more than a few surprises. None of them could predict what would happen after graduation. Who could now? Perhaps that really quiet, kind of weird guy in math class would go on to become the President of the United States. Perhaps the student voted most likely to succeed was married straight out of college and became the mother of eight kids. Maybe the guy with the old, beaten up Chevy called the "Brown Bomber" became the next Lee Iacocca. Maybe that buck-toothed, freckle-faced girl who laughed like a hyena became a top glamour model.

Seniors needed to be very open-minded about their futures as well as that of their peers. In twenty years, the graduates may learn never to say never.

Spirit Spelled Victory

The cheers in the gym were deafening. It was definite; the seniors won the overall Spirit week competition again. The competition included the races at the Homecoming Pep Rally, the overall Spirit Week costume competition, and the Spirit Link sales. The seniors blew the other classes out of the water.

The pep rally was outstanding in terms of spirit, and the graduating class led the pack. The senior class dominated the costume competition with some of the most outrageous get-ups imaginable. With combined speed, coordination, and talent, they zipped through the pep rally competitions and won all races but one. The sale of spirit links was phenomenal, and the seniors proved their pride by winning the cheering competition.

Though the pep rally was the proving ground of the seniors' prowess in competition, the true proof of the pudding took place in the parking lot in front of Hardees on Friday morning of Homecoming Week. Over one-hundred cars were jammed into the small parking lot; the nearby supermarket was sold out of streamers, tape, and balloons. Why? All for the Senior Spirit Parade. After decorating the cars, the procession began. While half of the cars drove straight to school, the other half took a detour in order to strut their stuff in the parking of their friendly rival First Colonial. What a way to wrap up a week of fund and excitement.

On the Road Again

Seniors Enjoy the Creature Comforts

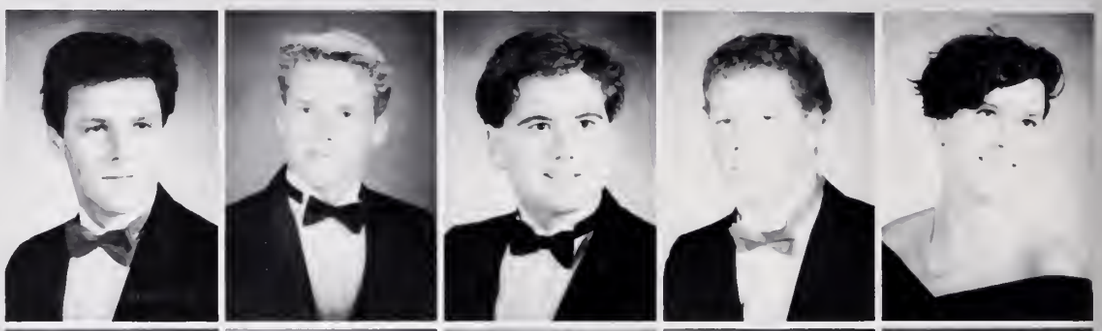
"On the road again, I just can't wait to get on the road again," sang Willie Nelson. Though he was not a big hit with seniors, he did have something in common with them. Little did he know, but the majority of seniors felt just the same way. They couldn't wait to get on the road again, either. This was proven each afternoon at two o'clock by the traffic on Great Neck Road, which swelled due to the outpouring of students from the parking lots.

The car carried with it connotations of status and freedom. Those who drove to school could arrive a good twenty minutes after the buses. They could also stay after school as late as necessary without having to have Mom come to pick them up.

Sometimes, however, this creature comfort seemed more a burden than a blessing. On any given winter day, several seniors were tardy because their cars refused to start. The risk of a detention was not the only risk some ran. Some ran the risk of bankruptcy because they had to pay an arm and a leg for their cars.

Was the car really worth the tardies and the money? You bet it was, most agreed. After all, how else would a senior have gotten to those Friday night parties? How else could one have been in the senior parade? The pros definitely outweighed the cons.

Complete with green and gold tailfins and "PRIDE' license plates, this was the seniors' official spirit car.



Kevin P Felty — Do it and don't think about it.

Let the Contest Begin!

Current events, current events, current . . .

"Our contestants for today will be Jenkins vs. Smith and Godfrey vs. James. Everybody knows the rules . . . let the contest begin!"

The competition was cut throat; the questions, deadly. It was a survival of the fittest. In order to win, one had to be married to his newspaper. The game: Jeopardy (current events style). The answers ranged in topic from the most important international affairs to television trivia. Anybody could try it, but anybody giving the wrong answer was jokingly heckled and booed. Nobody wanted to tie; nobody wanted to lose . . . the consequences: a deadly current events quiz. Everybody wanted to win, so the classes battled right until the end of the bell in hopes of scoring those few extra points.

That Was Then

Gee, remember when, guys?

Keep your eyes on the watch, back and forth, back and forth. Now relax. You are getting very tired; your eyes are getting heavy —very heavy. You are asleep. Let your mind drift back, back to your freshman year.

The year when everything was, well, bigger. You were degraded about your size and age, and remember how you used to dress? How about the countless times you stood shivering at the bus stop in the rain while the upperclassmen drove by in their cars, snickering? Worse still were the times when dear old dad had to chauffeur you and your date to and from . . . those were the days, huh?

Ah, nostalgia! It's for the birds especially the fledgling Falcons

Leah A. Kelley

Michelle E. Kent — Look high, look low, look everywhere to achieve success.

Tara U. Kim — Things can only get better

Kelly L. Kincaid — Look out world, we've only just begun.

Larry T. King — The bigger they are, the harder they hit!

Michelle L. Kitchens — You don't have to be tall to get ahead in life.

Christopher S. Kmet — Don't gain the world and lose your soul

William F. Knudsen — Revival and Survival.

Mike G. Kotarides — We cannot discover new oceans unless we leave the shore.

Mark D. Kravchek — The mind tires before the body

Over the years, Caddy "Bo Derek" Wood has opted for more traditional hairstyles.

Lisa A. Lacroix

Mike L. Lambe — It's almost over, so what's next?

Sorry to Eat and Run . . .

Lunch Time Distractions Kept 'Em Busy

Sure, lunch was a time to fill grumbling stomachs, and, yes, it was a social period. However, many students put those fifty minutes to the pursuit of high education.

Whether it was in the din of the cafeteria or in the quiet of the library, many seniors grabbed the nearest newspaper and attempted to swallow the contents whole. One could never be too ready for a current events quiz. In order to get ahead of the game, some chose to complete homework due the next day. Some chose to receive math help in room 160.

The SCA room was, as usual, a hotbed of activity. Class and SCA officers strode in and out, performing various duties instead of eating lunch. Now, that was devotion.

Though some studied and most ate, still another portion of students opted for recreation. The volleyball net was always busy on warm days, and students battled it out. Hackey sack was a popular way of passing the time. Seniors could be seen contorting their bodies in order to kick or hit the hackey.

Whatever they did during their lunch bell, the seniors did it to the hilt.

As anyone could see, Tammy Tasheiko and Kristen Wilcox took their current events very seriously.

Ugh!

Whaddya Mean, Senior Slump?

Ugh. Every year the seniors talked of that dreaded disease called "slump." Those who weren't seniors thought it was all in the mind. Then they became seniors and found it wasn't true. One cannot fully describe slump until it has been experienced.

Parents just didn't understand. They thought it was simply a two-week stage. "Why should you have slump?" they asked.

Why, indeed.

Who wouldn't groan over having to rise at six o'clock each morning? That was so one could make it to school at the inhumane hour of seven-thirty. Dogs weren't even up that early.

Why should you have felt down when you were faced with the prospect of a current events quiz every day? One day of not reading your paper and you were lost.

Also, what was so bad about having eight hours of homework? So what if you had to stay after school until four-thirty? Anybody could handle that, right? Think again.

There was no reason to gripe even though some were stuck with the deadly duo of Legan and Lambriola? Who cared if they were the two toughest teachers of your educational career? You recovered, didn't you? Well, almost.

Lastly, what was so bad about filling out all of those forms for colleges and scholarships? So what if you had to write twelve different essays? It's good practice. Oh, yeah? Tell that to the muscles in a senior's hand.

Slump. Will it ever end? Seniors everywhere hoped for a cure.

At the bi-monthly Executive Council meeting, Sarah Ashton and Audrey Hernandez managed to look slightly interested; Tammy Tasheiko gave up.

Clifton L. Nelson — Been dazed and confused for so long it's not true.

Jennifer J. Nelson — When you don't know the answer, time passes — you don't.

Stupid Pet Tricks

Do Pets Really Resemble Their Owners?

As seniors prepared to leave for college, many faced parting with their beloved pets. Although students knew they would be separated from a purring or panting creature, they would not forget the warm snuggles or a cold wet nose. What would be remembered most, however, were the stupid pet tricks peculiar to each animal. Some tricks were so ridiculous that only the owner could find humour in them.

Did your dog bark at the bells on game shows because he thought it was the doorbell? Did your animal scamper off with your stuffed animal so he could sleep with it? Did your kittens do the high five while playing together?

Each pet has a special trick that endears him to his owner. Memories of such oddities accompanied each owner to college. If one ever became lonely, he simply pulled out a picture of his favorite domesticated creature to lift his spirits. If that didn't work, he might have placed a long distance phone call to home simply to hear that much missed meow, bark, or twitter. The things they did for those animals.

Considering she had four animals, Nell-Garwood MacEachern coped the best way she knew how.

Destination Unknown . . .

But the Choices Abound

Everybody had a favorite place to go on a Friday night. Many people went . . .

. . . to the Jewish Mother. A huge video screen, great food, and a cool atmosphere — what more could one ask?

. . . to parties. They were a great way to get acquainted with others, among other things.

. . . to the Mall. Shopping, then a movie made a full evening for anyone.

. . . to a football game. This usually preceded the parties. At the games, people socialized more than they watched football.

. . . to TCBY for a nutritious munchie.

Though not the most exciting thing to do, it was a nice, non-fattening way to end the evening.

So, there was a wide choice of places to go on a weekend. The fun started at 2 o'clock on Friday afternoon, and it didn't stop until Sunday evening when seniors buckled down to their homework. Did someone say "homework?"

On Thursday nights, Young Life was the place to be since there was always something interesting like the donut pass as performed by Rob Bagby and Chris McElfresh.

essed in Cleopatra mode, Denise Michelson wondered if e was in the right millenium.

Dedicated to their class, Sarah Ashton and Colleen Crowley spent numerous afternoons working on the senior section of the yearbook.

This is Now

It's Fab, It's Here, It's Wow, It's Now

They put on their red Reeboks; they strapped on their Swatches. They pulled on an Outback Red shirt and tapered jeans. Where were they going? The seniors were probably headed for a concert — whether it be The Monkees or R.E.M. Perhaps they were on their way to see a box office hit such as "Top Gun" or "Stand by Me." Just for a change of pace, some chose to go to the Naro for their sixth viewing of "Stop Making Sense."

To wrap up the evening, many went to TCBY. Others chose the livelier atmosphere of the Jewish Mother. Both places offered a wide choice of sweet nightcaps.

No matter where they went, the seniors went in modern style.

Happy just to be together, Greg Super, Barbara Elliot, Claudia Brassil, John Stauffer, Sarah Hess, Christi Edwards, and Meg Dobson smile in unison.

The Jewel of the Style

Now Appearing on a Finger Near You

I was, despite all obstacles, prepared for my journey to the jewel. I had in mind a picture of how it would be — sparkling, elegant, unique. I found myself in oppressive surroundings as I stood by the other exhausted people. The line moved slowly, and I was quickly running out of patience. But what could I do? I had to continue my quest. At last, I caught sight of a flash, a glimmer. Then the jewel was clearly visible. Then two, three, four! A multitude of jewels came into view!

As I inched forward, I could see the merchant and his wares. Every jewel that Balfour had was just within my reach. Their colors danced before my eyes — rich greens, delicate aquas, deep reds, and fiery diamonds. My head began to swim with confusion. All of the choices just complicated my decision. How would I ever choose between all these precious stones? Did I want silver or gold? 10K or 14K? Suddenly, the perfect stone in the perfect setting caught my eye. Yes, this was the ring of which I had dreamed and sought since the 9th grade — the jewel of the style.

We, the Juniors

In Order to Form a More Perfect Class

As our American History teachers told us, our Founding Fathers undertook the job of establishing a nation, and the junior class worked toward the making of "The Perfect Class." The first job we undertook was the weeding of the flowerbeds in the front. In two days of hard work and back-breaking drudgery, volunteer juniors succeeded in transforming the weed-infested masses of earth into perfect examples of fine gardening.

Needing money to fill our treasury for Ring Dance, the juniors decided to sell Ready Teadys, those cute little bears. It was a roaring success and contributed heavily to the money supply of the class. And to make the year the perfect dream envisioned by the juniors, there was Ring Dance, and with the perfect Ring Dance the juniors finished their "Perfect Year!"

Selling spirit links, Caroline Coleman and Kevin Kratzer show their spirit to the entire school.

Floating into Wonderland

Victory on a Flatbed

"I have never seen a class with so much enthusiasm as the class of 88!" exclaimed Debbie Moser, the junior class sponsor, when asked what she thought about the junior class's involvement with Homecoming 1986.

The Class of 1986 walked off the field with first place in the float competition this year at homecoming. John Fox, as the class's float chairman, came up with the idea of "Alice Through the Looking Past Mirror" as the homecoming theme "The Past is the Key to the Future." "I would like to thank everyone that helped me construct the float. I'll be looking forward to next year's float which is going to be even better than this year's," stated Fox.

Not only did the Class of 1988 win first place in the float competition, but it also raised the largest amount for the United Way, $260. In the spirit link competition, the juniors fell to third place behind the sophomores and seniors. What the juniors lacked in links they made up for in spirit during Friday's pep rally, where relay races were held between the classes. In yet another display of the Junior's own brand of spirit, Nicole Andrews and Sherri Miles, Junior Class representatives, paraded onto the field during the half-time show.

"Ten Most Dreaded"

What Juniors Dread the Most

1) PSAT's — "You mean I wasn't supposed to guess?" Carmen Akbari
2) U.S. History — "It's my hardest class!" Anna-Lisa Bentii
3) Chemistry — "$C_6H_{12}O_6$ — Aren't they playing at the Jewish Mother?" Shelby Lehman
4) Term Papers — "Bibliography cards, note cards — ARGH!" Jeannie Murphy
5) Playing 2nd fiddle to the seniors — "It stinks!" Jen Taylor
6) Being denied a parking sticker — "Four miles down Shore Drive and on the left!" Mr. Porter
7) Being seen on the "Big Cheese Mobile" — "Maybe if I duck they won't see me!" Carolyn Clark
8) Not having a date to Ring Dance — "Girls' Night Out"
9) Not getting the right ring — "But my ring wasn't supposed to have a drum majorette on it!" Gary Scholl
10) Not passing — "You mean 'E's' don't mean excellent?" Nick Crisafull

Just a sample of the PSAT alarms Jeff May.

Juniors Answer the Call of Duty

The junior class leaders gave it their all to further benefit the class from Homecoming to Ring Dance. With Kevin Kratzer as President, Denise Hobbs as Vice President, Sherri Miles as Secretary, and Kristin Regula as Treasurer, how could the junior class be anything but terrific and original? And that it definitely was. "The junior class proved enthusiastic and pulled together to help us meet our goals this year." said Kevin Kratzer.

Originality was the key which opened new doors to the Junior Class, from meetings on the beach to Sherri and Denise's homemade cookies. Ready Teddy Spirit Bears, Homecoming Football Raffle, and Value Checks were some ingenious ideas that raised money for Ring Dance, which highlighted the Junior year.

While doing dog tricks at Young Life, Sherri Miles shows her spirit.

Spirit Bound

Sophomores Jump Into The Competition

There was a new presence felt at the Homecoming pep rally, There was an undercurrent a little different from the other classes that ran through the spectators at wrestling matches and basketball games. When the cheerleaders gave the word, ". . . all for sophomores, stand up and holler!" the tenth-grade class did just that. No longer was there a freshmen murmur. Instead the sophomores emerged from their silent shells to compete shoulder-to-shoulder with their older peers and screamed at the top of their lungs. "It was great to see so much excitement from our class!," commented Brent DiGeronimo.

Sophomore spirit was on the rise all year long and it grew by leaps and bounds.

"We have so much more responsibility this year than last because we are sophomores, not freshmen," quipped Coquette Lisa Crutchfield.

In the Leap Frog competition, Kathryn Murray hurdles Scott Eun to the cheers of ecstatic sophomores.

Sophomores Chris Murphy, Annette Terlizzi, Scott Eun, Brent DiGeronimo, and Matt Valerio rally for first place in the class spirit competition.

Visibly disappointed, Chris Murphy and Jeny Duffy prepare for another Drivers' Ed. movi

The Lights Went Out . . .

That's Entertainment?

The lights dimmed, the shades were pulled and yelids lowered as yet another filmstrip flashed on he screen. "What'd ya' do in world geography oday?" "Nothin', just saw a movie." were amiliar quips of sophomores throughout the ear.

Besides being of educational value, the video our gave them a chance to attend to important natter. "Usually I fell asleep, but sometimes I vrote notes and talked to people," said Natalie Andrews.

"Religions of the World Parts I & II," "UFO's in a Moving Car," and "The Life of a Protoplasm" were not exactly Academy award material. It was a pity that all of those nice TVs weren't put to a more interesting use, like showing "General Hospital" or "St. Elmo's Fire." Why didn't those teachers use the machines for something besides educational purposes?

The thought of yet another filmstrip strikes terror in the hearts of Julie Dameron, Roxann Roberson and Kim Miller.

Digging Deep

Into pockets and competition

Scraping into the depths of pockets and purses, begging fellow sophomores for money, the class of 1989 managed to gather enough money for the SCA spirit link competition to receive second place at the end of Homecoming week.

The week previewing the Homecoming football game, sophomores banded together to create the class of '89's float, which won second place in the float competition. Not only did the sophomores display their spirit through the spirit link competition, but during the relay races at the pep rally on Friday, they placed first in the balloon race, second in the orange race, and third in the spirit yells.

The sophomore class showed real initiative in participating in Spirit Week this year!" said Leigh Mazach.

Getting the Hang of it

Sophomore Style

There was a lot of employment out there, and sophomores seemed to have found it. Many sophomores spent their after school hours on the job. When asked what their new found income was spent on, answers varied. Girls seemed to have had more definite idea. Their money was used for clothes, jewelry, and makeup. The guys seemed to lose track of their money. "I don't know where my paycheck goes," replied Britt Heisig.

Some sophomores were saving their money for bigger and better things. "I'm saving my money for a car," commented Amy Josephson. And speaking of cars, many sophomores learned to drive.

Sophomores took drivers education in their health classes. Moat of them didn't show much enthusiasm about the classroom instruction; however, when it came to driving behind the wheel, they seemed much more enthusiastic.

Driver's Education is one of the year's highlights for Amy Josephson and Kathryn Robertson.

Soaring to the Top

Officers had the Formula for Success

We had an awesome year!" exclaimed Danielle Mayette, vice-president of the sophomore class. And we did, thanks to the efforts of the leaders of the Sophomores. "We had more involvement and enthusiasm, which were the keys to our success," said Danielle.

With a year under their belts, the sophomores would no longer be considered rookies. "I think our class was more enthusiastic and wanted to get more involved in what went on in the school," commented Matt Valerio, Sophomore Class President. With such officers as Matt Valerio, president; Danielle Mayette, vice-president; Diana Vann, secretary; Chris Howard, treasurer; and Kevin Brookes, second vice-president, their success was virtually guaranteed. These talented officers organized the Gummy candy sale and the talent-show, and two big, successful fundraisers. The officers of the sophomore class led the classes to a roaring success of a year!

A-MAZE-MENT

Freshmen Learn the Labyrinth

Orientation is a tradition for incoming freshmen. Every year, the ninth graders gather in the auditorium for their first look inside the school.

At that first glimpse of the school, each individual felt differently. The size of the school was intimidating, as were the upperclassmen. "A lot of people are afraid of the upperclassmen, but I thought they were very helpful," commented Shaula Bullen.

The first day's anxiety erased everything that orientation told them. "I was really nervous since Cox is such a big school, but to my surprise I didn't get lost," said Stephanie Brass. Lost, but not alone, the freshmen braved the first day of school accompanied by their friends.

Now, in retrospect, they look at that shaky start and are grateful for one another's support. Looks like they made it!

THE SCA-TEAM

Freshmen Officers

The freshman SCA officers did a great deal for their class. We were especially lucky to have a terrific team working for us this year. Through juggling all the project suggestions, listening to the complaints, and keeping the paper work straight, they somehow made it through the year. The officers that we were so fortunate to have were, President — Amber Medlin, Vice President — Alison Hanwit, Secretary — Leila Doran, and Treasurer — Ryan McGuinness. These were the students that succeeded after a hard week of campaigning and speeches and the nervousness before the incoming results. Our team of officers accomplished a great deal, and did it with style. Thank you officers for doing an excellent job of guiding the freshmen class!

Adding a New Twist

Freshmen Key In On Homecoming

Freshmen enthusiasm soared dur-ıg Spirit Week. There was a good owing of costumes and we took cond place in the banner competi-n. Freshmen green and gold pride ally showed through!

The freshmen float reflected the ne and hard work that our con-uctors put into it. Using the theme he Past Is The Key To The Future" e float depicted a scene from the 50's and a much anticipated graduation. Senior Tammy Tasheiko summed it up, "The freshmen float looked very competitive this year."

Courtney Wilson and Amber Medlin were the two freshmen princesses elected to Homecoming Court. For Courtney, it was an emotional night, "When they called my name over the public address system, I looked at all the faces in the stands, and I was just really happy and excited."

The Wild Pair shoe store offers Courtney Wilson and Kim Russell some interesting fashion concepts.

At the Mall

Freshmen Off Duty

On any given afternoon or Saturday, you could find freshmen checking out the local malls. At the Limited, a popular store filled with the latest fashions, quite often there were clothes — hungry girls. Angie BonDurant commented, "The Limited is one of my favorite stores. I love all of their clothes!."

At Aladdin's Castle, you'd find ninth-graders vying for spots at popular games such as Gauntlet or Pole Position, or maybe watching videos. They were also in force in the restaurant areas, munching on a Big Mac or maybe a slice of pizza. "It's amazing. I spend most of my money on clothes and food," said Kristin Rohdenburg.

Why spend so much time at the mall? "Because it's fun," said Kim VanValkenburgh, "It gives us a place to hang around. In the summer, it's the beach; in the winter, it's the mall."

So whether shopping, snacking, or just hanging around, freshmen were never at a loss for something to do at the mall.

WHAT A CONTRIBUTION!

Freshmen on the Sports Scene

A Great Neck uniform at Cox? Yes, 's true. Though the majority of eshmen athletes play for Great eck, Lynnhaven, or Independence, here are a few exceptions. The ennis team profited greatly from the fforts put out by Susie Kawecki and yssa Orchid. Three of the top seven embers of the cross-country team ere ninth-graders: John Allen, Craig Mathews, and Sean McCormick. These exceptional athletes were only but a few who played for Cox.

The majority of talented athletes decided to play on their junior high teams where they would be counted among the top. Jennifer Venable, a halfback on Independence's field hokey team was quoted as saying, "I really enjoyed playing for Independence. It kept my Eagle spirit alive at Cox."

We would like to thank those freshmen, who, without them, their junior high teams would be lost. Their contributions should not go unnoticed. Great job, guys!

Under the Influence . . .

of Our Administration

Did Dr. Karlen in a cheerleader's uniform make us sit up and take notice? "It was absolutely hysterical. I couldn't believe it was atually her!" said junior Jenn Taylor. Our administration had a positive influence on our everyday lives, from seeing Mrs. Waters at a football game, to catching a glimpse of Dr. Karlen with her pompoms. Our principals supported us in everything we did, from standing on the sidelines in the rain at soccer games, to greeting students in the halls at the start of each day.

Teacher Spirit Shines Through

Miss Terry Sawyer in a clown uit? Coach Gary Hartranaft as a easer from the fifties? Of course! hat's what teacher spirit was all out!

Whether you knew it or not, acher pride extended beyond the assroom walls. Why else would liss Beckey Depaolis and Mr. Syl- ester Smith have spent their Friday ights collecting tickets at football ames? What else would prompt lrs. Margaret Beckner to spend a eekend at a VHSL yearbook con- erence?

This same pride was evident as Mrs. Kim Hux kept her usual seat behind the girls' basketball team, and Dr. Kathleen Angle was always on the fringe of an activity snapping pictures.

So don't wonder why Mr. Leon Hoots had on a pair of white platform shoes a la Pee Wee Herman, or question why Ms. Laura Godfrey was looking a lot like June Cleaver. It's just their Falcon Pride showing through!

After Hours

Sponsors Go the Distance

It wasn't the money and it wasn't the glory that kept them there alongside the students long after quitting time. It was something much more important that made Mrs. Marilyn Wiley give up her afternoons and weekends to sponsor debate. "I love debate because for me it is a combination of exhilaration, excitement and challenge which results in a giant ego trip," said Mrs. Wiley.

What prompted Mrs. Debbie Holland to sponsor SCA, "Student activities are an important part of a school and a student's life. They benefit so much in the areas of responsibility and leadership training."

According to Mr. Larry Becker, "Imagine a German Club member savoring his last bite of Wienerschnitzel that he ordered himself in German, the seniors hammering the last nail in their Homecoming float, or the graduates switching their tassels in unison at Commencement. These tiny moments of learning and success make sponsoring the German Club and the senior class all worthwhile."

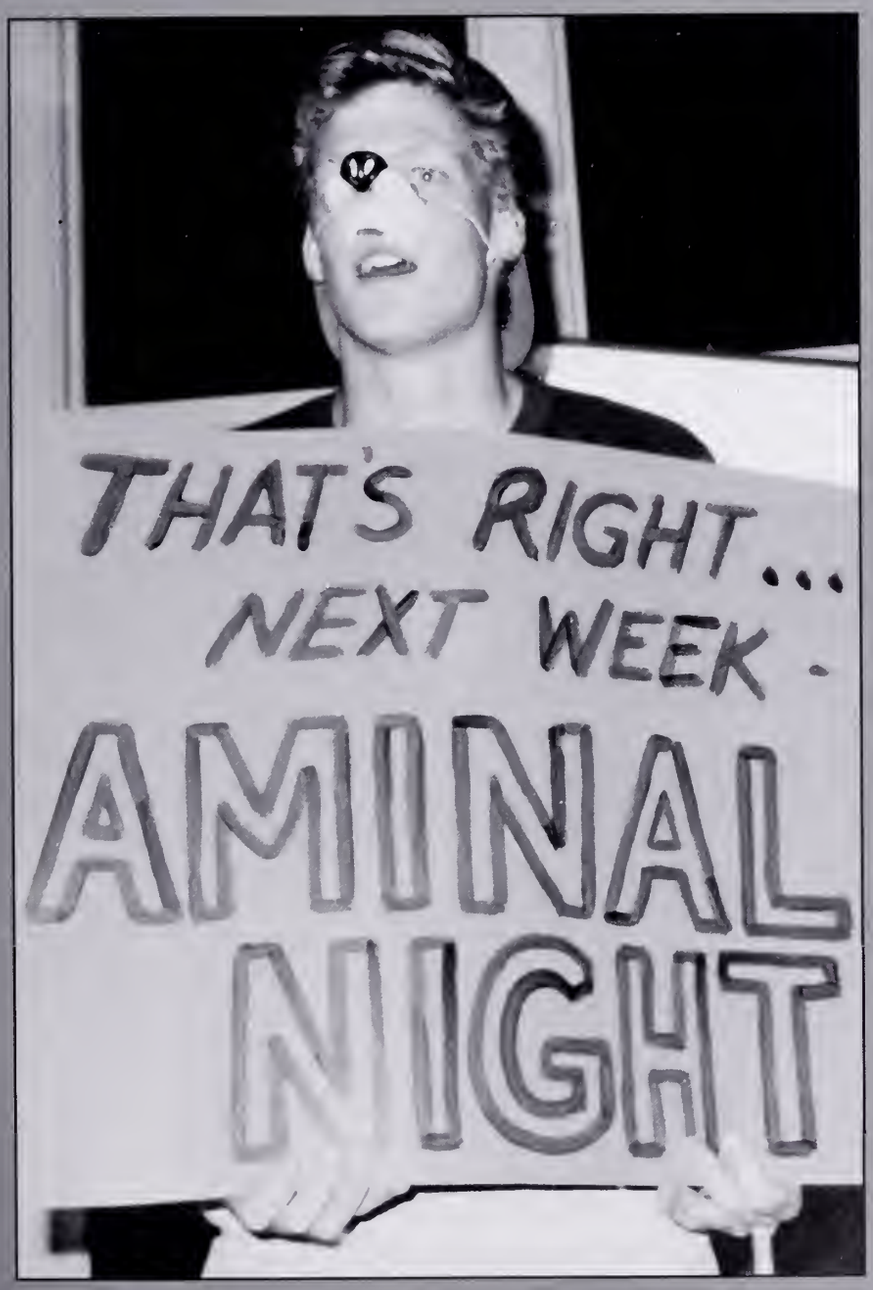
Organized InCOXitation



Under the clubs' umbrella was an array of groups varied enough to satisfy anyone's interests, and a place where any student, regardless of age or ability, could find a niche. Whatever the field, politics, the fine arts, service, career builders, or outright funseeking, the wide selection of clubs was there to provide an outlet. Clubs boasted large rosters and numerous activities for members who enjoyed a year of service, fund-raising, and just plain enjoyment as they participated in Organized InCOXitation.

Walking billboard, Wendell "Wolf" Cosenza displays the meeting's theme.

Romancing the Good Times

French and Latin Clubs Lead the Way!

Let the good times roll! Boasting its largest membership ever, the French Club swung into action early on with an every member pizza dinner. Under the leadership of president, Pat Baldwin, the club kept its homecoming tradition alive with a third place in the float competition. Service projects included a food basket at Thanksgiving and tutoring in French. "Nearest and dearest in my heart is our project AGAPE which supports a village school in Haiti," said co-sponsor Mrs. Margaret Beckner "because it involves gifts other than money." The club also took part in a scavenger hunt and dined out at Le Charlieu for a taste of haute cuisine. The year was capped off with a spring visit to Busch Gardens.

One of the most active language clubs is the Latin Club. From the state convention in the fall to Certamen in the spring, club members occupied themselves with a diversity of activities. To raise money, 1,000 decorative candles were sold and some of the proceeds went to Toys for Tots. The Latin Club also assembled a food basket at Thanksgiving. On the lighter side there was a Christmas party to ring in the holidays and preparations for State Latin Convention competitions in arts and crafts, literature and language.

A Cultural Experience

Spanish and German Club

The Spanish and German clubs have enjoyed a successful and funfilled year. Throughout the past year, the Spanish Club has been sponsoring a child from Mexico, while also lending a hand to the needy people close to home by providing them with food baskets at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Along with president Becky Starbuck, vice president Jen Acosta, treasurer Mike Speckhart, secretary LeAnn Neubert, and historian Henry Baker, the club went to many of the area's Spanish restaurants for dinner meetings. The high point of the year was Foreign Language Week, held in March, which gave everyone the chance for fun and a little friendly competition. In the spring, the Spanish Club went to Busch Gardens and ended the year on yet another high note.

The German Club had a busy year. In September, members took a trip to Das Waldcafe restaurant in Newport News. October brought the building of the Homecoming float, which was based on their award-winning float from 1984. The second trip to Das Waldcafe came in November and was a great success. Members held a Christmas party for patients at the Medi-center in December, and sang Christmas carols in German. They served hot cider, and later sang along with the patients. A Christmas party was also held after school, which included games and cake. January and February brought a Foreign Language tee-shirt design contest. Designs were submitted from the whole school. Tee-shirts went on sale before March so they could be worn during Foreign Language Week. March brought participation for members in the Foreign Language Festival at Green Run High. April was busy with a trip to Busch Gardens and several lucky club members were able to take a trip to Germany, Austria, and Switzerland to experience foreign culture.

It's Not Just A Club

It's An Adventure!

DECA and the Industrial Arts Club both had a productive year. As well as meetings and club activities, these clubs helped students to find jobs and learn skills for later in their lives.

This year DECA opened with a huge banana split. Numerous members came to help build it with all the trimmings. In December, DECA held tryouts for its fourth annual fashion show. This show had models who are students at Cox and features clothes from many Virginia Beach stores. The Fashion Show, held in the spring, was a great success once again.

The Industrial Arts Club slowly grew and became more active. This year they were involved in the "Toys for Tots" program. The ninth grade construction classes built wooden bears for the needy. The tenth, eleventh, and twelfth graders did preventive maintenance for cars to earn more money for the club.

Members also cleaned track equipment for a school project. Officer this year were presidents Mar Momando and Kevin Reed, vice president John Coates, treasure Tom Legros, secretary Chris Smok and sergeant of arms David Perry

Hot Off the Press

Falcon Press and Wingspan

The past year has been a busy one for Cox's publications. Falcon Press, the newspaper, attended, along with Dr. Kathleen Angle, a workshop in Athens, Ohio at Ohio State University. From there the momentum picked up and never slowed as the staff participated in two more workshops in Virginia Beach. The reporters did not miss a beat as they covered sports, current events of local national interest and social issues such as Drunk Driving. This extensive coverage enabled them to win first place awards at the Virginia High School League and Columbia Scholastic Press Association Publications Division Workshop.

The Fine Arts Publication, Wingspan, also attended workshops held at Virginia Wesleyan College. Co-Editors Torri Brown and Karen Roullet oversaw a staff whose activities ranged from fundraising to a layout and design of the magazine. To pay for the cost of printing, the staff held bake sales after school and sold Christmas ornaments and memo-boards. Christmas also saw the staff playing Santa's helpers for elementary school students as they answered letters from the children to Santa. The spring months were the busiest as Wingspan stuffers read, edited, and revised poetry and prose for the magazine. The finished product was available for purchase in May.

Administrative Helpers
Always on the Run

Helpers, take your message, get t, go! And so they did, running rands for this teacher or that cretary. Why the school would ost certainly stop without the lpers.

Office helpers traveled to the four rners of the school for the cretaries, teachers, parents, and ost importantly Mrs. Waters, Dr. arlen, Mr. Porter, and Mr. illiams. Office helpers worked ght along side with the clinic lpers, collecting attendance cards d helping injured students up and wn the stairs.

Library helpers made sure that everyone who entered the library signed in and all who left signed out. Another vital part of the Library helpers' association were the Audio-Visual helpers. Without these specialized aides, who assisted the librarians, teachers would not have been able to get the necessary equipment, such as VCRs or slide projectors with which they taught their classes.

Yes, once again, helpers were essential to the sanity of the school. Without them, the workload for faculty and other staff would have been much heavier.

Spirit Soars Like a Falcon

Coquettes and Pep Club

The spirit was better than ever. The students joined with the Pep Club and the Coquettes to make the most spirited year yet!

The Coquettes started a year of rebuilding a tattered image. The beginning was try-outs. With only six girls returning, there was little hope of a good squad; but after two summer camps, one at James Madison University and the other at Donna Wilkin's School of Dance, the Coquettes started a long uphill battle.

They obtained a choreographer, Donna Wilkins. Mrs. Wilkins helped in their performances and behind the scenes with helpful suggestions like new performing uniforms to help change their image.

The first test for the girls was orientation. They had all worked very hard in preparation for the event, but they were nervous. This was a group of people who had never heard of or seen the Coquettes. Also, there were people who had been at Cox for two or three years, and they expected to see the usual routine. They all received a shock. One person said he couldn't believe it; the Coquettes were all together.

The Pep Club, under sponsor Mr. LaBarbera, had an enthusiastic year. As a new club, they progressed well. There was a large membership. The officers were president Kathy Slough, vice-president Danielle Mayette, second-vice Alison Miller, historian Kim Senter, and treasurer Jenny Abbott.

Though it had a late start, the club was busy. The members sold green and gold Cox pennants in January, which were a big success. Throughout the year, members could be seen and especially heard at various sport events.

Reaching for Physical Achievement

Volleyball and Science Clubs are Where It's at!

What could holiday helium balloons, mosquito control, hospital volunteers, and X-Rays possibly have had in common? You could have asked any science club member and the answer was simple . . . Science Club!

President Kelli Malloy oversaw a number of activities as diverse in nature as the many areas of science itself. The Club took several field trips to local areas pertaining to the study of science, such as a visit to the Virginia Science Museum in Richmond and the Marine Science Museum in Virginia Beach. They also took a tour of the Non-Invasive Diagnostic Areas at Virginia Beach General Hospital, where pieces of equipment like Cat-Scans, Sonars and X-Rays were explained to the group.

On the lighter side, there was a canoe trip in the Virginia waterways, a pool party, and a fundraiser which sold helium balloons at Christmas to students.

"The club's objective is to expose members to various areas of science through speakers and field trips. I also gain something from each activity. It opens doors to me in aspects of science," stated Mr. Stuart McCauseland, sponsor. "Besides I love doing all of those neat things!"

Among the newest additions to Falcon Country is the Volleyball Club. The club served as a means to involve students in both fellowship and sports. Under the leadership of sponsor, Miss Terri Sawyer, the co-ed group held meetings twice weekly to practice and improve their playing skills.

President Jerri Friedsam, a player for five years, began the club as a means to continue her play. According to Friedsam, the sport must first begin as a club before being made a competitive sport in Beach schools. "We really need to make volleyball a sport where we can compete with other schools," Friedsam said.

The core of twelve to fifteen club members had shrunk since it's start from a beginning membership of around fifty people. But according to Friedsam, as the sport's popularity grew, so might the club's membership. "Everybody should come out and play!"

The vice-president of the Science Club, Mike Stallings, jokes around while giving his report.

Band and Flag Team

The Cox High Virginia Stars have had a very successful marching season under the superior leadership of their new director, Mr. Bob Cotter. They were awarded second place in the Neptune Festival Parade, third place at the Bayside High School Band Competition, and an excellent rating at the Virginia State Band Festival. They also won recognition in the categories of Best Drum Major and Best Drum Line. At the Tidewater Band Festival Competition the band placed well in the finals. They have improved greatly and are still a tradition of excellence at Cox High.

The Flag Team under the leadership of captain, Tracy Davis, has been an integral part of the marching band. They remained in perfect step under the choreography of Becky Oglesby who also helped to instruct the Flag Team along with Barbara Elliott. Mrs. Cotter, the adult instructor, was also on hand to help with instruction. The team's routines visually complemented the band's music. Since many members of the team did not take band during the day, they often attended extra practices in addition to rehearsals with the band.

Plans and Judges

I.C.C. and Executive Council

Two integral parts of our political system at Cox are the I.C.C. and the Executive Council. The Executive Council deals with special school activities such as dances, elections and student teacher relations. The I.C.C. is made up of the Vice-Presidents of the various clubs at Cox. It is their job to approve or decline any activities or projects that are proposed by the clubs.

The Executive Council swung into action early by overseeing the election of Freshman officers and did not stop until June. The Dance Committee, headed by Ronnie Shank and Kim Brown planned the Homecoming and Winter Dances. We were entertained at the Winter Dance by th Ravens! The Student Teacher Rela tions Representative, Jennifer Koss planned the Secret Santa project an a reception for the teachers whic were both great successes.

All in all both the I.C.C. and the Ex ecutive Council made life at Cox bet ter for everyone.

Entertainment at Cox!

The entertainment section this year has been organized and has pleased everyone. The spring play by our Thespians was "Dark of the Moon." Our fall play, "The Man Who Came to Dinner," was a great success and received an enthusiastic response from the student body.

The Madrigals, our select chorus, delivered a magnificent performance at the band and choir program. As well as this concert, Madrigals have performed at Norfolk General Hospital, the Diamond Club at Met Park and at various P.T.A. meetings.

Altogether our choral and acting groups have shown their organization and their want to please the student body.

Service for the School

Library Club, Video Club, and CMA

The primary goal of the video club is not profit, but service. Club members were behind the cameras at sporting events, pep rallies, and also helped out with video equipment in the classroom. They were not organized as most clubs were with officers; rather they were established more along the lines of a publication, with an editor, assistant editor, etc. Among their productions were a tape of Homecoming which was played during the Christmas season and "Falcon Focus" which is a video news magazine featuring school life and other activities. According to Mrs. Joan Manuel and Mrs. Mary Stuart Darden, who are the co-sponsors of the club, "We enjoy working with students who are interested in putting together a program on video tape. It is interesting as well as rewarding to watch their progression and enthusiasm for the production take shape.

Along with promoting reading, the Library Club wanted to spread a little good cheer at Christmas. Taking the money they earned from their doughnut sale, the club bought poinsettas to give to patients at the Shore Drive Rest Home. The objectives of the club were to encourage interest in the library as a profession and to honor the teachers during National Library Week.

Politicians of the Future

Advancing in Leadership

The political ticket to be on is the Teen Age Republican's ticket, better known as TARS. Members of TARS participate in projects which get students involved with the United States government. In the fall, TARS held a congressional election debate between Joe Canada, Owen Pickett, and Stephen Shao, to let students get a glimpse for themselves of who the best candidate for Congress was. TARS also sponsored speakers such as Delegate Bob Purkey and Congressman G. William Whitehurst to come speak to the student body. President Andrea Akers said "TARS was not just for Republican teen, but for anyone who wants the opportunity to know and learn more about the United States government and the people who run it."

South Africa? Refugees? Star Wars? Ask any Model United Nation member about foreign relations and they will give you the details. Members of the Model UN formed committees like the committees of the real United Nations in New York, and discussed ways of resolving world issues. Working for the Future

FHA and FBLA

The students in FHA and FBLA are working for their futures. FHA members become prepared to enter the world of business.

The FHA year began in the summer of 1986. Anne Pasley and sponsor Mrs. Kim Hux traveled to Orlando, Florida, for the 1986-87 National Leadership Conference. Anne took second place in the national competition, presenting an illustrated talk on teen suicide and its prevention.

FHA members chaired the local STAR (Students Taking Action for Recognition) events for the city of Virginia Beach. Members of FHA sold cookbooks for their annual fund-raiser. They also made an annual contribution to the Joy Fund. During Vocational-Education Week, February 9-13, FHA held a reception for the Vocational Education teachers.

The purpose of FBLA, sponsored by Ms. Gail Riffle, is to promote leadership and participation in business classes as well as interest in the school and community. Students are encouraged to participate in both regional and state contests and to attend conferences on regional, state, and national levels.

Cox FBLA started off this year by serving as guides for the PTA Open House. They held a fund-raiser, selling calendars and locker mirrors, a project that earned over $1000.

Once a month FBLA visited Lynn Shores Manor, a convalescent home, to play bingo with the residents. It was fun seeing them enjoy the games and watching their pleasure at winning quarters.

As a token of appreciation, teachers were sent a candy cane with happy wishes for the holidays. In 1987 FBLA members sold World's Finest Chocolate to raise money for Project ASK, a group to help prevent and cure childhood cancer. FBLA also had a pizza party and participated in regional events. Officers for 1986-87 were president Christina Lucas, vice president Kim Stroud, secretary Shelli Hunter, and treasurer Karen Roullet.

To The Top

SCA Meets the Challenge

Our SCA here at Cox is an integral part of the school system. The officers for the 1986-87 school year had a hard and challenging job, but they persevered and accomplished much.

President Wendell Cosenza, vice president Marc Mayette, second vice Caddy Wood, secretary Molly Whelahan, and treasurer Rich Walsh handled the school well this past year.

Our SCA homeroom representatives played a large part as well. They carried their homeroom's opinions and ideas to the SCA meetings, and reported the results of the meetings. SCA homeroom representatives attended a Delegate Workshop on December 13 here at Cox. They heard lectures on time plannings, parliamentary procedure, and evaluations.

Yearly events which took place again this past year included Freshmen elections, Homecoming, and the United Way Fund Drive. Special events for this year were a Student-Teacher Breakfast, Get-It-Straight Week, the Christmas Door Decoration Contest, and the Christmas Dance. The SCA also sponsored the Student-Teacher Volleyball Game with the committee headed by juniors Jen Koss and Mike Speckhart.

The SCA this year was one of the most successful due to the exceptional leadership of its officers and the dedicated work of its homeroom representatives.

SCA Representative Coordinator Bec Lemburg keeps attendance at meetings.

Service to the School

NHS, Key Club, and SADD

Cox's chapter of NHS or National Honor Society is one of the service organizations here at Cox. The members chosen are picked based on grades as well as their involvement in and out of school.

The officers for NHS for the 1986-87 year were president Audrey Hernandez, vice president Jennifer Lucas, and secretary Barbara Elliott, and treasurer Karen Roullet.

Members of NHS again this year offered tutoring sessions in varied subjects for students. These sessions took place after school and aided many students with classes.

NHS realized that the student body was receptive to the idea of sending messages to their special friends. Members sold Candy Grams, and carnations for Homecoming, Christmas, and Valentine's Day.

A tradition for NHS is to sponsor the Honor Roll receptions. Our principal, Mrs. Lottie B. Waters, honored those who made straight A's, and praised all those who were fortunate enough to make honor roll. Students who attended the Honor Roll reception for the first semester were privileged to hear our superintendent of schools, Dr. E.E. Brickell.

Key Club for the 1986-87 year here at Cox was busy. It is associated with Kiwanis International; the two groups do service projects for our schools and our community.

A yearly event for Key Club which was again a success in 1986-87 was the Miss Cox Pageant. Held on March 5, the contestants all gave stunning performances.

There was a fall officers' workshop with Kiwanis members. Those who attended saw speakers such as Mr. Joseph Hoffenberger, a 4-H representative, and the Lieutenant Governor for our Key Club district.

The Key Club also did volunteer work for Cultural Alliance. The members stuffed envelopes and put stickers on pamphlets; this was done at a pizza party at Key Club member Annette Terlizzi's house.

New at Cox this year was a chapter of Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD). Officers included Lynn Bolgiano, president; Allison Bloxsom, vice president; Raelin Storey, secretary; and Patrick Baldwin, treasurer.

SADD began its activities for the year with a Valentine pledgegram sale, where students promised to drive sober for the person they cared about. Other activities for the year included a newsletter distributed through English classes with editorials and statistics on alcohol and driving, an assembly in March with a panel of guests to answer questions from the student body, and an awareness week before prom including the showing of the movie "The Last Prom." In addition, SADD did volunteer work for Virginians Opposing Drunk Driving, sponsored service announcements on local radio stations for the holidays, and held biweekly meetings, some with guest speakers, and an occasional fun-filled pizza party for members.

An Annual Affair
Right Before Your Eyes

Right up there in importance among spring events is the arrival of the yearbook. Its distribution is as eagerly anticipated as the Prom or the Ring Dance, and to some, second only to Graduation. In late May, books are swapped for the traditional signings, and each reader savors the two-hundred-odd pages of memories.

It seems, however, that the majority of readers are in the dark as to just how it is that the books make their debut. What exactly went on every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon behind the somber black door of Room 160? Just who was Mrs. Beckner, and why wasn't she accepting any excuses? What was in those ungainly beige trays that Susan McClellan lugged around with her? And what did Saray Hess do with "croppers" and "picas?" You have the answer before you.

Co-editors Hess and McClellan, with able help from assistants Sarah Ashton, Carolyn Clark and Nancy Moore, worked with the staff from mid-July through May on the creation, design and editing of the book. Individual section editors drew layouts, wrote copy and found photographs to complete each of the spreads, sometimes working as late as nine or ten o'clock, or coming in on teacher workdays to complete their work.

Yearbook staff was more than a publication; it was a chance to work together, to share ideas, agonies and laughs. It was an annual affair!

Striving While InCOXitated

From early August to the end of May, the courts and playing fields resounded with the clash of helmet against helmet, the thud of balls as they bounced, whistles shrieking the beginning and end of a practice or a foul. The locker rooms had that unmistakable aroma of sweat, soap, and Atomic Balm; and they rang with laughter, pre-game cheers, game exultation, echoed the metallic ring of the last locker closed or the quiet acceptance of a loss. The sounds, the smells and of course, the images created by athletes as they ran, tackled, pinned or vaulted their way to the top left a lasting impression on us as we watched them Striving While In-COXitated.

A Run On Victories

Lady Falcons in the Limelight Once More

A heartbreaking season? Hardly! The Lady Falcons stepped to the plate with their usual finesse and swung into a strong season. Led by Seniors Shelia Higgins and Renee Meyers, morale ran high through the spring months as the team kept their play consistent.

The girls took the Bayside Invitational Tournament in April at Virginia Wesleyan College, handily defeating local teams from Bayside and Indian River, as well as shutting out a team from Montville, New Jersey.

The team's greatest disappointments were two losses to crosstown powerhouse Green Run which affected the girls' play in a key District match against Bayside. The win by Bayside ended the Lady Falcons' quest for Regional and State Competition, but according to Coach Art Koeppen, "All I wanted the girls to do was to have fun and to play their hardest." The girls certainly met that goal!

No Breaks on the Diamond

Fast Pitches . . . Slow Season

Time stood still as the batter for the Falcons stepped up to the plate. Tension mounted while the anxious crowd watched the bat come into contact with the ball. All heads were upturned as the ball soared over the fence, another homerun for the Cox Falcons. The fans went wild with the happy realization that a victory had been captured. This set the pace for the remaining matches.

Coach Tom Fisher stated, "although a 10-8 season is a good season, the team still didn't win it all. However," he continued, "the Cox baseball team did improve throughout the season and dominated over other area teams in the Indian River Tournament. The team really banded together to win."

Several scholarships were awarded to last season's team members, including Tim Fenn, who received a scholarship to VPI for his pitching. Tommy Boothe was granted a scholarship to VCU as a first baseman; and Matt Swingle and Reggie Moore, who are presently scholarship players at their respective colleges.

When asked who the team's main rival was, Coach Fisher promptly replied, "All of the district teams are rivals because when you play, you play to win."

With teammates looking on, Mark Barker eagerly awaits the pitch.

Boys Soccer Team Kicks Up Its Heels

It was like California in '49, the boys soccer team was out digging for the goals they needed to win. Paul Doyle was the leading scorer with five. With such outstanding players as Co-Captain Geoff Cambell, Ron Copeland, and, junior, Will Dasher the team placed fourth in the district, and had a third place finish at the end of the season tournament.

Mr. Jim Snodgrass said about the eleven seniors on the team, "We're going to miss many of the players who graduated last year." Especially notable were Geoff Cambell, who played in the first all-conference team and Will Dasher who played in the second all-conference team. Said Will Dasher, to sum up the season, "We had an awful lot of talent, but we had some bad luck and some injuries to key players that really held us back."

Boys Tennis Serves up LOVEly Victories

The ace came on April 15 when the Falcon netters defeated their arch rival the First Colonial Patriots 5 - 4 to claim an undisputed first place in the Beach District race. The team, led by Beach District singles champion Peter Brinkman, had a perfect 6 - 0 record and appeared to be on their way to a third straight District crown. Then came the bad bounce. Traveling to Kellam, the Falcons lost a close 5 - 4 match on May 6, which placed them in a four-way tie for first place and an eventual playoff to determine the District champion. Cox met Kellam in the first round of the playoff and again was defeated 5-4, thus temporarily ending the Falcons reign at the top of the Beach District.

Jimmy Youngberg, a four-year starter and Brant Pryor, a transfer from Northern Virginia, were the only seniors to graduate from the 1986 tennis team, leaving rising seniors Peter Brinkman, Michael Davis and Wayne Barrineau to continue the Falcon tennis legacy.

Making Strides

Outdoor Track Stretches to Win

Practicing the baton pass are John Mckinney and Mike Hopper.

It was a cold, early, spring afternoon, and the first practice of the outdoor season. Long unused muscles groaned from the hard practice they had to endure. These runners, sprinters, and jumpers had a long way to go to get in shape for the first meet.

Distinguishing the girls team under Coaches Glenn Barr and Melody Haynes, were freshman Jacqui Kelly, junior Michelle Myers, junior Natalie Taylor, and seniors Jackie Stanfield and Liz Jones. Said Coach Haynes, "We had outstanding performances from the few above, but we lacked depth."

Under coaches Vince Marshall and Al Habit, the boys track team was led by returning senior Wayne McNeal, a sprinter and a long-jumper. Also, outstanding on the team were two underclassman, freshman John Mckinney, sprinter and long-jumper, and sophomore Kit Ehrgood, a distance runner. Mike Hopper had to say about the team "I enjoy the team aspect of track. It's fun working with good friends for a common goal."

Whether it was during the hard practice or the grueling competition, the Outdoor Track Team did their best in their stride for excellence.

Charging to the finish line is Mark Bowen.

Practicing the pole vault is Aaron Auger.

Jogging laps to build up endurance are Jeff Scoffield and Erik Townsend.

Track members Jacqui Kelly and Margaret Hurt take one more lap before ending practice.

Star-Crossed Soccer

Lady Falcons Fall Short of Their Goals

Starting off the season with a smashing victory over Bayside, it seemed as if the Girls Soccer team would have one of those stunning seasons so typical of girls sports at Cox. But a winning season was not in the forecast for the Girls Soccer team as they saw winning hopes dashed by the close of the season.

Returning for the Falcons were co-captains Kristen Epperly and Erin Walsh, both of whom were selected for the Beach District First Team, along with teammate Liz Jones. Junior Becky Haselman was selected as a member of the Beach District Second team despite good, solid play by Walsh, Epperly and Jones' competitive drive, the Falcons fell short their earlier promise of placing higher in Beach District competition.

The team was plagued by numerous injuries and inner turmoil. Stated Coach Terr Sawyer, "We started the season strong, but had difficulty due to in juries and lack of unity."

Hard Hits on the Gridiron

Falcons Sweat out a Tough Season

August saw the team sweating its way through grueling practices which carried into sweltering September afternoons. The team, under veteran coach Al Habit, saw its hard work and hopes fade as the Falcons fell prey to stronger, more experienced teams.

Quarterback Keith Hinson kept optimistic fans hopeful as he threw for 1,011 yards and five touchdowns. Wide receiver Chris Fountain was another bright spot as he caught twenty-two passes for three touchdowns and 273 yards. Sophomore John McKinney had nineteen catches for 297 yards and averaged five yards per carry from the backfield for a total of five hundred and twenty yards. Perhaps the highlight of an otherwise disappointing season was the Falcons defeat of Eastern District's Maury High School. The victory boosted the Falcons' sagging morale and kept their hopes alive for that next elusive victory.

Giving a signal to his players, Coach Habit concentrates on the game.

Overtime Strokes

Field Hockey is Commited to Goals

Inexperienced, but proud! With only two returning starters the Field Hockey team's prospects were dim, picked to finish only fourth or fifth in the District. The seniors, though, were used to winning and overcame their teammates' inexperience to capture second place in the Beach District.

Kathy Fosina, Geraldine Maraia and Cathy Sereno were elected as the Tri-Captains. They each offered sound leadership both in philosophy and by example. They were supported by seniors Laura Edwards and Kathy Slough in their commitment to excellence.

Kathy Fosina had a banner year. Having been selected for the Junior Olympic South Team, she proceeded to win the Gold medal. Other honors included Most Valuable Player for the second consecutive year, and she was also recognized as the High School Female Athlete of the Year by the Virginia Beach Sports Club. To top off her good year, Kathy was the most highly recruited field hockey player in Virginia Beach history.

Kathy Sereno, most outstanding backfield player, and Geraldine Maraia, outstanding forward, along with Fosina, were selected to play on a Select High School Team representing the Beach District at the National Hockey Festival and finished second in the nation. Supporting the seniors were the underclassman starters Sherri Miles, Amy Craig, and transfer Simone Augsburger.

But without Coach Nancy Fowlkes the inexperienced team would never have gotten as far as they did. Said Kathy Fosina, "I believe our success was due to the outstanding coaching by Miss Fowlkes." The Lady Falcons record on the field was proof positive of that.

Running to Victory

Early Bird Gets the Win

Thump! Thump! The ground shook as fifteen cross-country runners practiced in the early morning darkness. In a radical new twist to Cross-Country training, Coach Greg Killough had the team on the track by six o'clock A.M. for an early morning practice. The potent combination of early morning and afternoon practices took the team on to the regionals for a fifth place showing — one place from State competition.

Led by Captain Jeff Scofield, Eric Townsend, and Alan Norman, the boys team competed in both the District and Regional levels. "With such a young team, — only one senior, two juniors, and the rest sophomores and freshmen in the top seven — the competition felt we didn't have a chance but we made a good showing," said Jeff May. To top off a good season Jeff Scolfield went on to the State competition at UVA.

Despite injuries to both its co-captains, the girls Cross-Country team finished third in the District and eighth in the Region. Leading the team, Jacqui Kelly who returned from a severe ankle injury forcing her to miss two-thirds of the season, represented the team at the State competition — for the second time. The other Co-Captain Heather Miller was also plagued by an ankle injury during the later part of the season. As summed up by Jacqui Kelly, "We worked hard to achieve our goals." Facing injuries and the dim prospects of a very young team, both the girls and boys Cross-Country teams showed true Falcon spirit in their run for victory!

Smashing Victory!

Aceing the Competition

In his first year as tennis coach, Mr. Glen LaFerriere found himself with a courtfull of talent and a wealth of drive to win. The Lady Falcon netters had a stunning season as they stroked their way past local competition, losing only to Beach District Champions, First Colonial, who boasted the top two players in the state.

In many respects this past season was one for rebuilding as four out-of-sync starters graduated. Co-Captains Caddy Wood and Mandy Davis led the team to impressive matches, including a defeat of Eastern District Champions, Maury High School. "The girls worked very hard to be ready for the season and continued to work until the end," stated Coach LaFerriere. "The team improved as a whole throughout the year."

Although the two losses to First colonial were disappointments, the Lady Falcons drew on drive and determination to carry them to a very solid season record.

Falcons on the Links

Led by the strong play of Warnie Conley, the Falcon golf team had a respectable season and placed third in the District. This play enabled them to qualify for regional play where two of the golfers, Warnie Conley and his teammate Brandon Boyd represented the team.

The Fall season saw Coach Tom Smith and his team practicing at Broad Bay Point Greens Country Club regularly. This new course offered ample opportunity to the Falcons for improvement of their game. Most matches were played at Red Wing Golf Course or Sleepy Hole Golf Course.

Coach Tom Smith reflected on his team stating "The whole team was not really strong enough for State Competition. We had some good seniors whom we'll miss next year."

Falcons Wrestlers Reach The Peak

The sweet smell of success was in the air as hundreds of spectators crammed into the stuffy gym. With the first notes of "Bad to the Bone" began to play the crowd roared with excitement as the unbeaten wrestlers, hot on a winning streak, took the floor.

Silence fell over the crowd and the match was ready to begin. Coach Gary Hartranaft gave a few last minute pieces of advice while administering a few last minute chiropractic adjustments. Hartranaft sat casually back in his seat eagerly awaiting the match.

The whistle blew. One after the other, the unstoppable wrestlers took their opponents down. One, two, three and they triumphed, pinning and showing no mercy.

The packed gym was now clammy with the stench of perspiration throughout it. The once loud and rowdy fans were now hoarse and more subdued, but they continued to show their support.

Holding up their reputation the mighty wrestlers continued their winning streak by once again upsetting their opponent.

Looking on with frustration Coach Gary Hartranauft and Coach Billy Guttermuth give their attention to a match.

On The Rebound

Boys Basketball Weathers A Tough Season

The winter weather was cold and harsh, mirroring the bleak season endured by a dedicated boy's team. The win-loss record was by no means a reflection of the efforts of the team and veteran coach Vince Marshall. Despite a season of disappointments, the team managed to keep its morale high through considerable contributions by Kevin Shea, Craig McLaughlin and crowd pleaser Bowen Beacham.

A crucial factor in the season's outcome was an injury to standout point guard Taekwon Hodges which forced him to spend several games on the bench. Nevertheless Coach Marshall was complimentary in his assessment of the team's play and perseverance in the face of defeat. Effort it appears, was not to carry them through their season.

No Competition!!!

Lady Falcons Take 'Em To The Hoops!

For veteran Coach Stuart Holland and his Lady Falcon basketball team, these wins seemed almost effortless, as the girls breezed past the local competition en route to their annual trips to District, Regional and State competition. Tri-Captains Kathy Fossina, Kelly Kincaid and Michelle Kitchens lent their expertise to underclass first-stringers, creating an invincible combination of experience, skill, and the hunger to take it all.

With Kincaid as center, the competition had more than a difficult time reaching the basket, and with the ball in her hands, Kincaid was more than a mere threat. Among the underclass players, Juniors Allison Moore, Kristen Horton, and Tammy Hedspeth, and Sophomore Sarah Captain provided some of the finest in local defense and offense. Holland also had a strong bench on which to rely.

The Lady Falcon basketball team also had its share of dedicated fans who followed the sweep of the Beach, savoring the 20 win season. The only regular season loss was to Kellam, who, by the season's end, fell to the Falcons three times.

The March trips to Regional and State tournament play is fast becoming a tradition for the girls. The dynasty lives on!

Gymnasts Vault To Victory

The girls' gymnastics team had an excellent season as they placed second in the Beach District competition and qualified for both regional and state competitions among individual performers. Leading the team were Seniors Kim Haynie and Natalie Taylor. Haynie was ranked third on beam, third in the floor exercises, and was also ranked as the fourth place best all around gymnast in the District. Taylor's top performances were her uneven bar routines and most notably, her success on the vault events, in which she achieved a career high mark of 9.55. "I've spent a lot of time with Natalie and Kim, and I'm really going to miss them," commented Coach Melody Haynes-Hartranft.

Despite a strong team, and standouts like Taylor and Haynie, the turnout for gymnastics was unfortunately light as a rule. There was a lot to be admired on the floor; skill, grace and strength. When asked about the reason behind her team's strong season, Haynes replied, "it was because of lots of practice, dedication and hard work."

Raising Yells

Cheerleaders Boost Spirit

Cheering tryouts were held in the spring of 1986, and more sophomores made the squad than ever before. Co-captains Kari Broocke and Mandy Tavares compensated for the addition of more sophomores and a less experienced squad by having two and three practices a week during the months of July and August. They also had at least one practice a week once school began.

They used their lunches and study halls to make all the banners to cheer on the teams, and they practiced their fifteen-man pyramids and their fifty-some-odd cheers after school. Cheering was a time-consuming activity, especially because the squad had to attend all the football games, basketball games, wrestling matches, and most of the other sports activities.

"We put in a lot of hard work and effort," said Holly Edwards, "and it was all worth it to see the spirit in our school come out."

The cheering squad was different from previous ones because of the administrative decision to have a single squad for a whole year. Usually there had been a fall squa for football, field hockey, an tennis, and a winter squad fo basketball, wrestling, and gym nastics.

"The cheerleaders are an im portant part of inspiring student in volvement from the sidelines, commented senior Pat Baldwin.

There's no way to explain it other than to describe it — you were inCOXitated with learning.

Divine Devices

A Hands-On Experience

Gadgets, gizmos, and gimmicks: they were in departments as different from each other as home economics and art class. Science labs provided welcome relief from the monotony of daily lectures, not only for the students but for the teachers as well. Sometimes it wasn't just the monotony that was broken, but the equipment that suffered also. Even teachers were not exempt from an occasional mishap. For instance, during Mrs. Moser's first year teaching, she had one of those embarrassing moments. "During a demonstration I was giving, I broke everything to pieces. The lab contained three flasks and four beakers. I was using my arm as a pointer, and when I turned around, I knocked everything to the floor," said Mrs. Moser. "I guess the only consolation I had was that I didn't have to pay for everything."

These labs, when successful, serve as hands-on experience that most students find fun as well as educational. As Andy Turner said during a Biology lab, "Hey, these thingamabobs are neat!" Gadgets — just can't live without them.

Building Character

English, Math, and Social Studies

"I know you don't like it, but it builds character." This expression has been passed down by mothers everywhere, yet its meaning still remains unclear.

How can anyone build character by sitting home on a Friday night because of last weekend's escapades? But, it is especially hard to believe that one builds character in English, Math, or History class. These classes follow a very strict curriculum throughout high school.

All of us have spent countless hours doing monotonous grammar exercises, math problems, and history essays. Although we didn't know it at the time, those four years of hard work and mind-boggling problems have given us something that went beyond the textbooks.

Taking all of those somewhat boring courses has enabled us to develop a sense of persistence, patience, and responsibility. These traits serve as guides for the rest of our lives. Maybe, just maybe, that is what building character is all about.

A Different Tune

Everyone Hears Their Own Beat

All of the students at Cox had their own rhythm. By choosing courses and making decisions, they created their own song.

No one person took the same subjects as his or her classmates. The most popular electives varied from typing and independent living to psychology and public speaking. There are also those courses that are rarely heard of: oceanography, photography, and shorthand. With such a large span of electives, ranging from Russian I, a new course at Cox, to the marketing classes offered by DECA, it was hard to find two people with similar interests.

The subjects taught allowed equal room for the career-oriented, college-bound, or consumer interested student to expand and become involved in the symphony called Cox.

We Sure Deserve It!

Field trips and assemblies provided a necesary break from classroom rituals. Many of these breaks'' were educational, but the difference in utine made them fun.

One Friday morning, for example, the entire enior class was bussed to the Pavilion to watch
e Shakesperean play ''Much Ado About Nothg.'' Never had studying British literature been entertaining!

One unusual break was when the lead flyer om the Blue Angels came and spoke to the udents during their visit to the Neptune Festival.
e talked about the duties of a Blue Angel and how a pilot becomes a member of this elite flying team.

Not all assemblies were educational, though. The much anticipated pep rallies gave the students a chance to yell, scream, socialize, and show their school spirit. The first pep rally of the year was quite an impressive sight for it was the only time that the entire student body was together in one place.

When you least expected it and most needed it, that long overdue ''break'' was there to keep you going.

Everything Your Art Desires

Media of Satisfaction

What do drawing pictures, marching in a band, and changing a tire have in common? All of them make up the many media of art offered at Cox.

Students showed their feelings through painting in Art I-V, many of them participating in city wide art contests. Also in the arts curriculum was art appreciation, in which students examined works by professional artists.

In the industrial arts department, students prepared for the real world by exploring career possibilities. Such courses as woodworking, electronics and metal technology were offered, as well as options for courses at the nearby Vo-Tech.

There were some students that just couldn't express themselves quietly; these people were always humming, tapping on their desks, or just talking. Well, there was a place in the arts for them, too — namely band, chorus, and drama. Our marching band, drama group, and madrigals received much recognition.

No matter what your artistic interests were, you were able to satisfy everything your art desired.

Blinded with Science

The Light of the Future

The scientists of the future got their starts in the classrooms of today. Would-be geologists scrambled around Rice's Fossil Pit and examined erosion of streambeds in Earth Science, while aspiring chemists tackled the elements and Boyll's law. Biology gave a glimpse of life under a microscope or a slice of life in a dissecting pan. "Fossils and Rice's Fossil Pit make the year for Me!" exulted Mike Roetker, a ninth grader.

The science department was well represented this year at the Virginia Junior Academy of Science by senior Kristen Wilcox who was elected President. The science curriculum also met the needs of advanced students with AP Biology and the addition of AP Chemistry to the curriculum. Sciences were seen as the light of the future by those students who planned to pursue careers in scientific fields.

Psyche!!

Classes for the Mind

Problems, problems, problems. Who would want to sit and talk about social problems for 50 minutes? Well, many students seemed to be gluttons for punishment because Psychology and Sociology were popular classes. Child abuse, social diseases, and quirks of the mind were the usual bill-of-fare for these students. Though these topics could have been quite gruesome, the teachers made them quite interesting. Mr. Tom LaBarbera and Ms. Michelle Walker, who was a new faculty member, taught Psychology. Sociology classes were taught by Mr. Sylvester Smith and Mrs. Ginny James.

Many people had difficulty distinguishing between what is taught in Psychology and Sociology. Sociology is the study of interaction between people and social problems, whereas Psychology is the study of the mind and its workings. To provide a new approach to Sociology, the class took a field trip to the municipal buildings to view the legal system in action and the social effect the law has on its subjects. Both of the Psychology classes took in films like "Future Shock," and daytime talk shows. These provided a good basis for the discussion of topics under consideration. A day in court or the morning with Donahue? No problem!

Drug Emporium

"Savings so big you need a shopping cart"

WHAT IS DRUG EMPORIUM?
We are high volume, low priced health and beauty aids store with a complete pharmacy for your convenience

HOW CAN WE OFFER SALE PRICES EVERYDAY?
We eliminate the middleman and warehousing needs. 95% of Drug Emporium merchandise is bought and sold directly from the manufacturers and all special purchases are passed on to you.

IS EVERY ITEM IN THE STORE DISCOUNTED?
Yes, we do not run special sales or loss leaders in ads! Our everyday prices are less than our competitors' "special" prices. We offer consistently low prices. You may find identical items marked at different prices because we never mark-up existing merchandise when new shipments arrive! We encourage you to buy the lowest priced item!

Over 23,000 items sale prices everyday!

Colophon

The 1987 Talon, Volume 26, was published by Hunter Publishing Company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Mr. John Perry is the publishing representative. The press run was 1300 copies. The finish of the paper throughout the book is Warren Gloss. The cover is a four-color limited lithographic design, drawn by Mick McKay. The endsheets are 65 lb. stock, color #115 Orchid Amton Text. The majority of the type used in the book is Helvetica Condensed. Body copy is printed in 10-point, captions in 8-point, and kickers in 18-point.

Most senior portraits, faculty and underclass pictures, group pictures, and assorted candids were taken by Mr. Hall Ward of Max Ward-Delmar Studios, Chesapeake, Virginia.

If bubble gum did not exist, the Talon would not exist either.

From the Editors . . .

We would like to give special thanks to the following: Mrs. Gail Riffle for helping type the index; Mr. Leon Hoots, Dr. Kathleen Angle, and Mr. Sylvester Smith for their help with photography; Mr. Hal Ward for his photography; Mr. Ken Janosko and Dr. Kathleen Angle for the us of the dark room; and especially Mr. Michael Porter for his theme, "The State of InCOXitation."

We would also like to extend our sincerest appreciation to the staff of the Talon. Thanks for putting up with us. We both agree that the hard work and tedious deadlines finally paid off. Also to our assistant editors — Sarah Ashton, whose knowledge was indispensable, and Carolyn Clark, who gave so much of her time. Our special thanks to Nancy Moore and Jeff May, our most dependable staff members. Finally, our sponsor, Mrs. Margaret Beckner, who belongs in the Hall of Fame for her writing and listening abilities. How could we have survived without our "Mom." We love you!

Thanks,
Sarah and Susan

After having won the spirit competition, the most inCOXitation seniors parade their spirit links around the gym at the Homecoming pep rally.

The effects in inCOXitation leave Lance Shores and David Griffin blowing bubbles.

A little French conversation provides the lighter side of inCOXitation for Hunter Tynes, Wendy Weniger, and Alex Mathas.

After a Year of InCOXitation

With the arrival of warmer weather, going about the business of education grew increasingly difficult as tan lines and surf racks made their appearance among the student body. The lure of the beach was overwhelming, and days of wool jackets and scarves seemed light years in the past. So did the year's activities: Orientation, club meetings, snow days, and wrestling matches. There were lectures, tests, term papers, and the occasional detention to be served. Young Life, pageants, parades, and parties gave us night life. We skated, surfed, cycled, and tried out new licenses,. We danced to dee-jays, Wild Kingdom, Phil Collins and decked our halls with green and gold or red, for Homecoming or the holidays. We donated money and time for others, and our sweat and inspiration enabled us to conquer on all fields — athletic and academic. The feelings of pride, of participation, of joy, of celebration, of occasional sadness or frustration captured us in one huge, glorious, technicolor bubble . . . a year of inCOXitation.

Contagious!
The Rites Of Spring

Although Spring's official arrival wasn't until March 21st, the early signs began to show as far back as February when seniors placed cap and gown orders. Seniors made daily mailbox checks for those all-important college acceptance letters, all the while planning for a long weekend ski trip to Snowshoe. Those of us who were less fortunate, had to content ourselves with an early departure and a late start, due to a dusting of snow and sleet. The discreet few, who were lucky and sneaky enough to capture those sought-after Genesis tickets, were the envy of the have-nots as they paraded their new Genesis tee shirts on the Monday after two sold-out shows.

March blew in a host of activities — Foreign Language Week, the Miss Cox Pageant, and underclass pre-registration — all of them sure signs that Spring was on its way. Ring Dance and Prom preparations merely contributed to the frenzy, as students bought gowns, rented tuxes, and even hired limos for the festivities.

A soft silence reigned over Cox country after the students were released early

In jubilation and celebration, the year ends with graduation.

Gradually, the weather softened, days lengthened, attention spans shortened, and tans darkened. By April everyone was counting days until that long-overdue and much needed Spring Break, and we returned with a vision of the year's end in our mind's eye. We saw the next slate of leaders elected to class and school offices, each candidate full of promise and the hopes of filling the shoes of their predecessors.

In late May, the seniors skipped en masse, ordered cards and announcements, and studied for their final final exams. Juniors, Sophomores, and Freshmen all pondered the summer months ahead and wondered if next year they'd be wiser, as well as older. Seniors would practice graduating on a hot field, attend the traditional Sunday Baccalaureate service; and at last, on a Friday evening in June, they would don their green and gold one last time. With the toss of a tassel and a cap thrown high at the close of the ceremony, each and every senior, as well as those of us who taught them, learned or lived with them, would be caught up in the year's final moment of inCOXitation.

Although his bubble burst, Lance Shores smiles as the effects of inCOXitation set in.

Tommi,

Theres so much to say, I don't know where to begin! I feel privlaged to be the first to sign this. Well you made it through this year without me! But Hey I was still thinking about you while I was at F.C. We've had some good times cruzin for guys, but not enough. Well we've got all summer! While your enjoying yourself in college I'll be in high school. Harbor fest was just so cool, don't ya think. We went there to meet guys and all we see is those damn nigers! Well we're gonna have to meet those awsome men out there. Just think there out there waiting for us, all we have to do is find them. You'd probably have more luck than I would. Your so pretty. Good luck in the future

Your friend
Denise
